1. How does a Western secular society affect the way you see the world?
2. Are you ever embarrassed anytime you hear about supposed miracles? Are you too skeptical? Conversely, are you too eager to believe? Why?
3. Have you ever bought into the false notion that improbable acts require extraordinary evidence?
4. Have you experienced or known someone who has experienced something that could be defined as a miracle?
5. Where are you on the spectrum of belief in current miraculous events?
6. What are some ways you can risk this week and be open to the Holy Spirit's leading?

John 14:2

I recently went to a Christian teachers' conference put on by Biola and Christian Educators Association International (CEAI) and the topic of the night was various approaches to living out your faith in the workplace. In one of the sessions, world-renowned philosopher J.P. Moreland was discussing the ideas of reasoned faith, risk, and the supernatural world and nonchalantly mentioned that he has 3 guardian angels around him. Needless to say, my interest was piqued. And just as it was piqued, he moved on without explanation. What was going on? Angels/demons, NDEs, miraculous answered prayer? What do we make of these things in an increasingly secular western world?
